Is seeing really believing? To some people yes, but to others no. Believing is really having faith in you and others around you. It's having trust in yourself and others. Today I would like to tell you about what I believe in, what I have trust and faith in.

I would like to tell you how I think God has helped and touched me though the years. He helped me stay alive when I was the sickest when I was in Russia. He saved my life by finding me a family who were willing to get me out of the orphanage. He found a family that he knew would love and care for me. He touched my life because he knew I wasn't ready to leave this earth yet. He also knew I had a great future with my new family.

To me the meaning of the Ten Commandments means the way that God wanted us to live. They would be ways to help us through our lives because he knew we wouldn't have order without it. We also wouldn't know how to run our lives. Most of the commandments teach us about how to treat others and ourselves. We would know right from wrong though God's eyes. These commandments were made so it would be the best for our souls so that we could reach the heavens.

Baptism for me means loving of the Lord and having faith and letting Christ into your life. Even though most of the time your parents make this choice for you, you will also get to decide if you want to go to church and love our Lord. This means that you have the decision to let Christ in with open arms and say yes, and being proud that you are baptized. Why should you be proud? It's because you know that you have accepted God into your life and happy to be apart of his family. This is also so you can have faith in him and yourself.

Confession and forgiveness of sins for me means that all you've done wrong you can be forgiven. That is if you are willing to admit, and also you are willing to let God forgive you. I believe even when you don't feel worthy of being forgiven God still forgives you. God has ways that are powerful enough he can forgive any wrong and loves everyone.

So in conclusion I believe that God has touched me and helped me through the years. I also believe that baptism is away to get closer to God if you are willing. The Ten Commandments were made as God's laws. And confession and forgiveness of sins where made so God can forgive you and you can forgive yourself. This is what I believe.
